

Haute Couture from the East

The Indian fashion industry is brimming over with talented designers and craftsmen, who blend tradition with modernity to create unique ensembles. Use of age-old techniques in contemporary milieus has helped Indian fashion establish its identity.

The Fashion Design Council of India (FDCI) is the apex institution of the industry, representing the interests of Indian designers and helping them access the global marketplace.

The India Fashion Week organized by FDCI is the annual jamboree where Indian designers showcase their best to a wide cross section of buyers from all over the world.

To know more about India, log on to www.ibef.org